I Am Not a Self-Sufficient Individual

Looking back over my life I am grateful to the many people who have contributed to my well-being, my education, my spiritual growth, and to who I am.

I say this because I fear that in our American culture we are tempted to think we can make it on our own, or, that we owe no one anything because we have worked our way to where we are. I confess, at times, I think maybe I could just walk away from all of my responsibilities and live on my own, depend on no one.

Fact is, though, I owe my life to my late parents who gave me life and the first portions of love as I know it. They, no doubt, taught me more than anyone else about life. I still depend upon them, their wisdom, their unconditional love, their work ethic, their values, and their sense of what is most important in life. They taught me how to respect God's creation, how to ride a bike, drive a car, fly a kite, cook, make carrot cake, and countless other things.

In the Christian life, I learned how to be a disciple through the people of the church I belonged to as a child, till age 26 when I was ordained there as a Minister in the United Church of Christ.

In the Bible, there is no example of a self-sufficient disciple. Even the apostle Paul, after his dramatic conversion and internship in the desert, went to Jerusalem and looked to the other apostles and disciples of Jesus to help him learn and grow in faith and leadership. (see Acts 9:26-30; 11:25-26)

When Paul went out to plant and build new church communities he always traveled in the company of others. He had a team - Barnabas, Silas, and Timothy. As was demonstrated by Jesus, Paul delegated authority and work to others, men and women, in the Christian communities he established. Those early years were turbulent times and much work, perseverance, and faith were needed to get the church up and running.

We best learn how to be disciples through loving communities where we work together, learn together, and give together. We can learn a lot of things through reading books, online websites, by watching TV, and such. But, the best learning, the longest lasting and most effective learning comes through personal contact where we seek to change the world together and make life better for others.

There are other communities to which we belong. Some of these include politics, town and/or city boards and committees, our work communities, sports communities, song, dance, and other forms of community service. Hopefully we live out our Christian discipleship in these communities, also. But, at times, these communities are formed to teach us how to use our teamwork to win over another team, to beat the other candidate, even to the point of talking badly about them, and to put our company in a better position to succeed than another.

In our Christian communities, we use our teamwork to show how we can help everyone live a better life, have equal opportunities, be loved instead of hated. We do not yell and scream to beat another. Rather, we kindly and gently give loving support and encouragement to all. If one person fails, we all feel the pain. If one person succeeds, we all rejoice. If there is physical contact, it is a welcoming and affirming handshake, or a loving embrace to bring comfort.

There is a race to be run. It is a race to bring hope and healing, to beat back violence, war, racism, sexism, and homophobia. We fight to replace hatred with love, vengeance with forgiveness. And, if necessary, we are willing to sacrifice in order to achieve our Christ-given goals.

I cannot be a Christian in a closet or in isolation. I need other members of the Body of Christ to be a Christian. Jesus has said, "Wherever two or three are gathered in my name, I am there, among them." (Matthew 18:20) He calls us to be the Body of Christ, his body, in community and in the world. You make me better, greater, more loving than I could ever be by myself. Thanks to all of you, from my late parents and grandparents, to my brother and his family, to all of my friends and colleagues, my past church partners to my present partners in ministry, and even to the persons I just met and got to know better this past week.

I pray that our Church, our Christian Community, makes you better, feel less alone and more loved, more courageous in discipleship, greater in faith, and comforted in your grief. I pray that we will be as the light of Christ in your life, to brighten your way, give you hope, and to increase your desire to, with us, serve Christ's call.

Yours in Christ, Dennis

United Church of Christ

February 10, 2014

Dear Tower Day Parents & Friends of Centre Church,

I am writing to inform you that after 29 years of dedicated service, Sally MacDonald will be leaving Tower Day School at the conclusion of this academic school year. Sally has made this decision after much thought. She plans to embark upon a new journey in her professional career in becoming certified as a Parent Consultant. This is an exciting new opportunity for Sally and I invite you to ask her how this may be of great benefit to you in the future.

We are bidding farewell to someone who will be tremendously missed not only at Tower Day School, but also within our entire Centre Church community. Although Sally's departure is a great loss for us, I have confidence that the recruitment process in hiring a new director will operate smoothly. Sally and her tremendously dedicated staff have built a solid and successful program, making the Tower Day Director position extremely attractive to candidates.

I wish to thank Sally for her years of dedicated service to the many children and parents who have passed through the doors of Tower Day School. We have been very fortunate to have had her as Director of the school for so many years. With the assistance of the Tower Day Board representatives, I look forward to this leadership search as a positive opportunity in finding a professional who, like Sally, will take Tower Day forward with innovative ideas, bringing solid growth to the program in the future.

Sincerely,

Bruce C. Weaver

Moderator – Centre Congregational Church
